

- How could natural ecologists meet your basic human needs?
- Use this field guide to:
- Record and draw
 - Collect information
 - Observe and discuss

Johann de Laet, Dutch Chronicler

“The land was „as pleasant as one need tread upon.”

Robert Junc (Henry Hudson's first mate)

“A convenient place abounding with grass...”

“a land excellent and agreeable, full of noble forest trees and grape vines.”

“Every thing in life is a circle. Everything is alive—the animals, the birds, the plants on Earth and the plants of the seas, the water, the air and the stones—and every thing must be respected. All things are part of Earth, which gives us everything we need.”

Native Plant Society

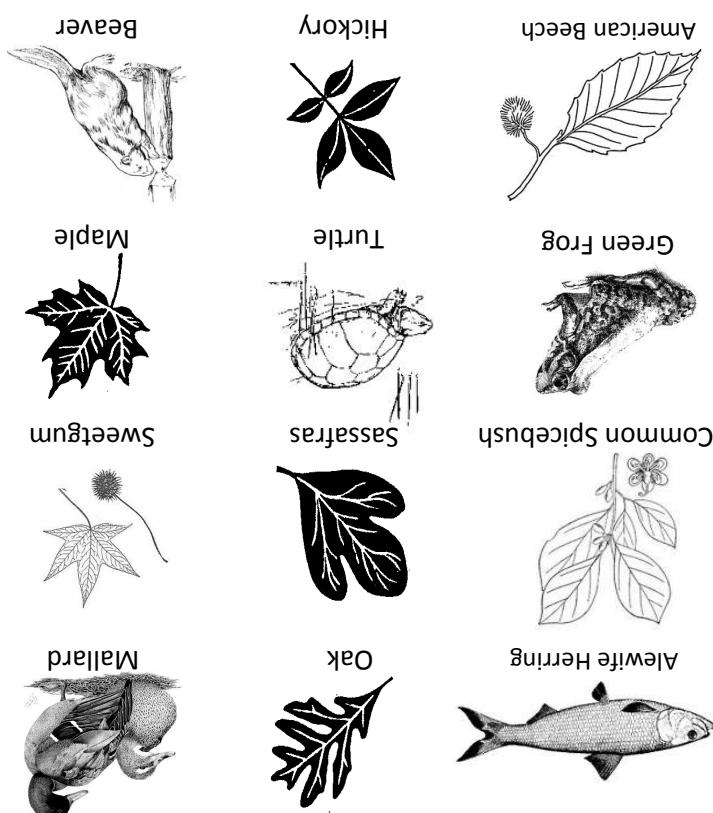

The New York Botanical Garden

Native American Walk Journal

- - - - Booklet Fold - - - -

1. Thinking about basic human needs, list your basic human needs in the chart below.
2. How might these needs differ from a Native American who lived here at least 400 years ago?
3. As you walk Native American laid trails at NYBG, find and identify resources they used to survive.

My Needs:	Resources I use to meet my needs:	Native American Needs:	Resources Native Americans used to meet their needs:

Identify some useful plant or animal resources.

As you walk, use this key to

Life Along the Bronx River